The contrast with his visit here in 1973 was marked. At that time, Mr. Brezhnev made a statement ou his arrival at the airport and rode in an open car. Today, there was no statement and he was taken m a closed limousine to Schloss Gymnich, a 17th-century moated castle about 30 miles northwest of Bonn, where the Soviet party is staying.

West German officials, who placed three special medical vehi-cles in the Soviet cortege, had been unable until Tuesday to arrange a final schedule for the visit, Mr. Brezhnev's first to the West since last summer. Soviet Ceiling on Missiles

This would clear the way, they added, for a meeting this summer between President Carter and Swiet President Leonid Brezhnev, who would then focus on the controversy over a Soviet bomber known in the West as Backfire.

The Soviet Union is believed to have 2,500 strategic missiles and bombers, or 400 more than the United States is permitted to have under the previous arms limitation pact, signed in 1972. Under the new limit, the Russians would have to retire 250 missiles or hombers, and the Americans would not be affected. Officials said that this provising might be a selling point in gaining Senate approval for the treaty. However, the proposed ceil-ing is higher than one originally sought by the United States and thus is still likely to attract criticism on Capitol Hill.

The overall size of strategic arse-

The same phenomena are occurring among white warmen, although on a smaller scale.

Same Phenomena

The birthrate for unmarried black women aged 15 to 44 (the years of female fertility, according to health statisticians) dropped by 13 per cent between 1970 and 1976. However, the number of unmarried back women in that age group rose by 38 per cent as divorces increased, the average age at marriage rose, and the children of the 1950s baby boom

At the same time, the number of married black women aged 15 to 44 rose by only 1.7 per cent. Their birthrate dropped by almost 30 per cent over six years to 92 per 1,000 women in 1976.

According to the report, married black women now have a slightly lower birthrate than married whites for the first time since such statistics have been compiled. The rate for married whites was 92.6 births

Among unmarried women, however, differences between the races is still wide. In 1976, there were 83.2 births per 1,000 unmarried black women, compared in 12.7 hirths per 1,000 unmarried whites. Teen-age mothers accounted for about half of all the out-of-wedlock

"It really is harder for children to be in families with low incomes, I think it's the income, not the marital status, that causes problems. But now, income is related to the fact that they don't have a father in the family with the type of income that a man has in this country today ... RIYADH. May 4 (WP)—The sale of U.S. F-15 jet fighters to Saudi Arabia is a profoundly important symbol in Saudi minds of Washington's recognition of their country's essential contribution to the wellbeing of the United States.

New Florida Plant May Change Garbage to Usable Natural Gas

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. May 4 (AP)—A mountain of garbage, garden trimmings and other debris will go into a new plant here in the next four years. What comes out may determine whether garbage power can help solve the energy crisis.

The $3.6-million pilot plant built under a Department of Energy contract was dedicated Tuesday, although even the designers said that they were not sure how the experiment will end.

"We don't know whether it will be conomically feasible," said Peter Vardy, technical vice-president for Waste Management Co., the builders. "We don't know how much it will cost to produce methane. That's what this plant is for."

The plant is designed to consume 50 to 100 tons of garbage a day, using bacteria and beat to convert the waste into 150,000 to 300,000 cubic feet of methane - a form of natural gas.

Donald Beatty, an assistant secretary in the Department of Energy, said that if all the energy could be recovered from all the nation's garbage, it could equal the output of 70 large power plants.

"Of course, it isn't possible to recover all of that," Mr. Beatty said. "hut at the same time you're solving a solid waste problem."

Fishing Crew Finds Bars of Floating Gold

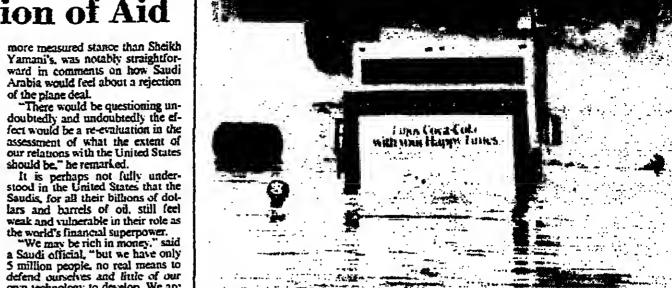

TOKYO, May 4 (AP)-Japanese fishermen yesterday discovered gold floating in the sea. They were on their way to the port of Shimonoseki when they found two packages of 24 gold bars attached to large inner tubes.

Captain Akio Hamamoto reported the find to the Japanese Maritime Safety Board, which appraised the gold at about 60,000,000 yen ($265,000 dollars). An official said that it might have been left for smugglers to take to South Korea where it commands much higher

Ex-Tax Official Held for Fraud In Nevada

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI)—Nevada's Man of the Year for 1970 and former deputy director of the state Tax Department has been arrested on 29 counts of embezzling more than $19,000 from his church.

James Lien, treasurer of the St. Peter's Episcopal Church and a former president of the Carson City Chamber of Commerce, said that the charges against him were part of a blackmail plot.

The complaint, filed by District Attorney David Small, says that Mr. Lien took the money from May, 1975, to June, 1977. Carter Increases Solar Research Funds

By David S. Broder

DENVER, May 4 IWP)—Sun Day in Colarado brought only chilly showers and political storms for President Carter.

The President sought to lessen the gloom by announcing at the site of the Solar Energy Research Institute in Golden that he has found an additional $100 million in this year's budget for research an solar and other renewable-source energy.

But his annuncement - designed to quiet criticism of an earlier cutback io solar research funds from the level in last year's Ford administration budget — did not ease the tension as Mr. Carter began a three-day swing through the politically hostile West. Mr. Carter was accompanied by

An urgent appeal to Americans to help clean up this mess.

The whole world is aghast at the extent and the implications of the 220,000-ton oilspill.

And much of the world has already lent support to the clean-up action. The Germans have sent pumps and other technical equipment. So have the Dutch. Spanish fishermen have sent small boats. Money has come from as far away as Hong Kong and Indonesia. French school children and Belgians are in Brittany right now, helping to clean the beaches and to save wild life.

Surely Americans are as appalled as others. They must want to help. Perhaps they don't know how. To help Americans, French and others (individuals and companies alike) who want to lend a hand, the American Chamber of Commerce in France is sponsoring and acting as a clearing house for a fund raising project entitled "Franco-American 1978 Project Brittany". This effort has the unqualified endorsement of all leading Franco-American organizations in France.

In response to our urgent request the World Wildlife Fund - U.S. and the Fondation de France have opened special accounts in Washington and Paris to receive the contributions which will be used to help rehabilitate the beaches, to save marine life and to save the lives of tens of thousands of birds which have been endangered as a consequence of this disaster.

Contributions of every size are needed. To qualify as a charitable contribution under U.S. income tax rules checks in U.S. dollars should be made out to the order of : "World Wildlife Fund - U.S."

All other currency checks should be made out to the order of: "Fondation de France". Contributions to the Fondation de France qualify as charitable contributions for French income tax purposes.

All checks should be mailed to: The American Chamber of Commerce in France, Franco-American 1978 Project Brittany, 21, avenue George V, 75008 Paris.

This is how you can actually do something about the tragedy of the French coast!

This is how you can help clean up the mess!

Opposition in Nicaragua Pressing for a Coalition

By Alan Riding

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, May 4 (NYT)—Opposition groups are pressing for the formation of a coalition government that would include the National Guard and the clude of the clude ruling Liberal party but would ex-clude President Anastasio Somoza.

The strategy reflects the frustration of the opposition at its failure to overthrow Mr. Somoza despite wide calls for his resignation and three months of civil unrest.

"The main problem is Somoza." opposition figure said. "If Somoza left, we could work out a peaceful transition to democracy with the Liberal party and the National Guard. It's the only way that olence will end."

Not surprisingly, spokesmen for the President, whose family has ruled Nicaragua since 1933, have dismissed the idea. "A dialogue without Somoza would be like seek-ing peace in the Middle East without Israel." the general's newspaper. Novedades, said this week.

Stepped Up Efforts

But the opposition groups plan to step up their efforts to divide the ruling bloc, trying to convince leaders of the National Guard and the Liberal party that they need not be identified with the Somoza regime. Opposition sources said some pattisans of Mr. Somoza have already expressed dissatisfaction with his

Swiss to Vote on Barring All Motors Once a Month

By Hanns Neuerbourg

BURGDORF, Switzerland, May 4 (AP)—A spokesman of Switzerland's largest automobile associa-tion warns that the Swiss "would become the village idiots of Enrope." A front-page headline of a motoring weekly asks, "Is poor Albania our model?" And in parliament, a deputy cattioned that the project might not be compatible with human rights conventions.

The comments concern an environmentalist draft amendment to the Constitution that would radically change the Swiss scene twelve times a year if it wins apploval in a national areferendum on May 28. 11 would ban on one Sunday every month all private motoring, all pri-vate motorboats and aircraft on and over Swiss territory.

The project is being pushed by a woman and eight men, all in their mid-twenties, who propose that the Swiss become international pacemakers in the search for new qualities of life.

It would affect more than two million cars, motorbikes, mopeds, motorboats and sports planes pri-vately registered in this country of a population of 6.2 million. It would also affect part of the 50 million foreign-licensed cars that cross into the area every year.

'More Quiet, Rest'

"But it would belp all those who want more quiet and rest, more kindness," said Hansjoerg Wittwer, 26, a communication specialist and president of the nine-member committee. The group has collected 115,000 signatures to put the issue to a national vote under the Swiss system of direct democracy.

The "Burgdorf initiative," named because the nine authors are graduates of the technical school here, dates back to 1973 Middle East war and the Arab oil embargo which triggered bans on Sunday driving in some European countries. In Switzerland, three car-free Sundays at that time created "almost a kind of national cuphoria," according to the Neue Zuercher Zeitung newspaper, with bicyclists riding on au-tobahns and horses trotting through downtown Zurich.

"We felt that should he a regular institution," Mr. Wittwer said. "Our teachers encouraged us and cootributed 800 francs, about $420, to get us started in our drive," Their main aim is not to save energy but rather to bring "greater awareness of true life values."

The response has exceeded Mr. Wittwer's expectations. The signatures were coffected within a year, more than double the number required to force a refereedum, and polls have given the Burgdorfers an

The federal government has urged rejection, arguing that the in-itiative would curb civil liberties in a way that is justified only in emergencies. A majority in parliament also has opposed the project although there were supporters in every party except the Communist. The Communists charged that the proposal would result in a "discrimination that would set us back by a century."

The government has also warned of diplomatic complications. Inter-national treaties would have to be revised if private planes were to be barreu from flying over Switzersland. A longtime controversy would be revived over territorial boundaries in Lake Constance, bordered also by West Germany and

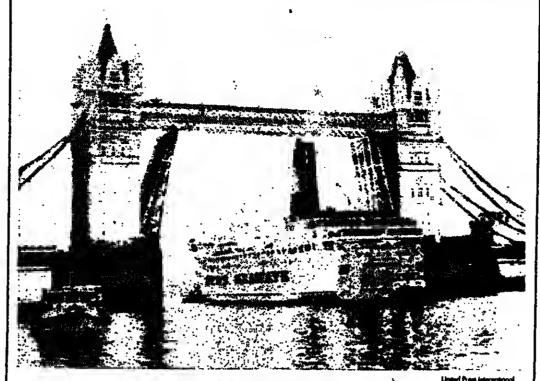

But the government especially believes that the proposal would seriously harm the tourist trade, in which revenues from foreigners total 5.5 billion francs. ($2.8 billion) a year. "How would we look abroad if we have to tell travelers Switzerland is closed today," asked Werner Kaempfen, director of the national tourist office.

Tourist Attraction

Mr. Wittwer argued that the project could become a tourist attraction. "For a tourist from Tokyo, for instance, a car-free Sunday would be a sensation." Transit travelers "who cause only costs, noise and accidents" could have their cars taken through Switzerland by the federal railways under a lucrative piggy-back arrange-ment, he suggested. "Approval of the initiative would certainly help us," agreed a high official of the railways which had a deficit of almost 700 million francs last year. The country's two large automobile associations, with a combined membership of almost a million, are worried about the sympathetic response to the Burgdorf initiative. "Private car traffic is one of the greatest achievements of the 20th century," said an editorial in the Touring Gazette of the Grisons, the canton where all motor vehicles were banned until 1927, "We would be the village idiots of Europe," said touring club spokesman Helmut Reimann.

Sympathizers of the Burgdorfers say that the odds are against them, Campaign, funds are timited although cash donations have been made by about 10,000 persons. Privately, campaign organizers admit they would be more coofident if the proposal were for six car-free Sundays instead of 12.

that shocked the world, were under the direct command of Franco. But, according to Mr. Vinas, the final proof of direct responsibility lies in the Spanish government's military archives of the civil war. These are still secret. Mr. Vinas and other historians have asked the post-Franco government of King Juan Carlos and Premier Adolfo Suarez to open the archives, but so far there has been no response.

By Stanley Meisler

"I do not know what the archives will show," Mr. Vinas said in a recent interview. "Perhaps they will show that Franco did not know anything about Guernica."

Moral Responsibility

But it is obvious that Mr. Vinas is convinced that the Spanish ar-chives will not exonerate Franco from at least the moral responsibili-ty for the destruction of Guernica. The German planes were under his orders during the war. Waves of German Heinkels, Junkers and Messerschmitts of the Condor Legion dropped 100,000 pounds of bombs on Guernica on April 26, 1937, in the first attempt in history to destroy an undefended town from the air and terrorize the civilian population. Perhaps 1,000 persons died — estimates vary widely - and the demoralized Basques of northern Spain soon surrendered to the armies of Fran-

It has long been accepted by many historians that the Condor Legion was testing saturation-hombing techniques, used later by the German Luftwaffe during World War II. During the dictator-ship of Franco, Spanish bistorians insisted that Franco was informed of the raid only afterward and be of the raid only afterward and became enraged at the Germans for doing it on their own. This version is disputed by Mr.

"The records show," he said. "that Franco was in very direct and very intense contact with the Con-dor Legion." Mr. Vinas has outlined the evidence for his conclusions in an article published in the Spanish magazine Historia 16 on the 41st anniversary of the bomb-

"I have strict orders to use the Condor Legion only as a bloe in accordance with your instructions and not in isolated parts. These were the conditions [under] which the Condor Legion ... was put at [your] disposition..."

Mr. Vinas, in his article, cites this document as evidence of the legion's "direct dependence on Franco."

"The use of the German aviation," Mr. Vinas said, "depend-ed on orders emanating from the generalissimo."
In short, Mr. Vinas contends, al-

Italian cars drive so well because Italian roads are so difficult.

If you want to see how well your car performs, visit Italy. Because only 5,500 out of 291,000 kilometres of our roads are autostrade. So much of the driving in Italy is over difficult roads. In fact, Italy is 1/3 mountains. more than any other car-producing nation in Europe. And, because of this, Italian cars have to be able to steer, brake, accelerate, and feel the road better than other kinds of cars.

And the automobile makers of Italy have concentrated on performance for so long now that there's such a thing as a car having an "Italian feel."

And this is particularly true of

At Fiat, every car we make has to have this "feel" or it doesn't get made. We test drive each of our prototypes for hundreds of thousands of kilometres on test roads and real roads like the ones you see here.

And our test drivers and engineers fine-tune each prototype until it meets our specifications.

And until it can handle our roads. And if a car can handle our roads, it can handle practically any country's roads in the world.

Ethnic Effects on Diplomacy

President Carter's proposal to lift the ban on shipping arms to Turkey was sustained by the narrowest of margins in the House International Relations Committee - and might have failed had one representative's plane been on time. The plan, which must have the endorsement of both houses of Congress, is thus clearly headed for a severe legislative struggle.

Whether Turkey should receive more of the weapoos that it used to take a substantial part of Cyprus before that island's fate is resolved is a very legitimate question. So is the effect of Mr. Carter's plane-package program upon the strategic, political and economic aspects of the Middle East, which also touched off a congressional battle.

However, in both cases, a good deal of at-tention centers on ethnic political considerations in the United States - on the reactions of U.S. voters of Greek or Jewish extraction, who outnumber Turks and Arabs considerably. This is a fact of life in the United States. A land composed so largely of immigrants of diverse roots must be affected, in its diplomacy, by those roots. German-Americans, for example, had their impact upon Washington's stand during the Franco-Prussian War and, at least through the political campaigns of 1916, on diplomacy during World War I. Irish-Americans, similarly, stroogly influenced U.S. positions with respect to Ireland's war for independence.

Europe, too, has ethnic problems, but they differ from those of the United States, Many Basques want independence from Spain and many Hungarians want the part of Romania they inhabit re-attached to Hungary. There is a Scottish Nationalist party in the United Kingdom — although it has suffered serious losses in recent voting. And the Corsicans who gave France its Bonaparte dynasty would like one of their own.

People in the U.S. who keep in touch with affairs in their former bomelands usually do not want to return there, or create on North American soil a colony. Often they, or their fathers, came to the United States to escape intolerable conditions. It is frequently the second or third generation that resists assimilation most strenuously and turns back emotionally to the lands whence their family line originated. This can bave its effect upon Washington's diplomacy, especially to the extent that elected members of Cungress cootrol it. And sometimes this effect may be regrettable from a national point of view.

But it would be wrong to assume that U.S. diplomacy must necessarily be dominated by ethnicism. When the chips are down the national interest usually controls - as it did in two world wars and in the main outlines of Washington's policy since 1945. The United States is subject to appeals based on ethnicism, and it does respond. That is a fact of national life. But the nation also responds to other appeals, of interest or moral quality. and in the long run they are almost always the most effective.

Duty in the West Bank

Large principles tend to be tested in small incidents. In the Middle East today, we can think of no more important principle than Israel's respect for the human rights of the Arab population of the occupied West Bank.

Every proposed peace plan envisions a degree of trust between Arab and Jew in that disputed area. We are heartened therefore to learn that Israel's Defense Minister, Ezer Weizman, has dealt sternly with some senior army commanders who recently violated the principle and further embarassed their government by trying to suppress the facts.

The incident occurred seven weeks ago at Beit Jallah, near Jerusalem, a few days after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, Israeli soldiers dispersing a demonstration against the invasion entered a school and threw tear-gas grenades into a classroom whose windows they had ordered shut. Many pupils jumped from the second story in fright and 12 were injured. The community complained and foreign correspondents reported the event. But military spokesmen vehemently denied it, prompting some Israelis to denounce Western reporters for spreading false "horror

Having finally learned the truth, Weizman this week removed the military commander in the West Bank, a brigadier general, for not investigating the complaints. A lieutenant colonel and a major are to be prosecuted for exceeding their authority and violating standing orders.

Tensions may be unavoidable in such a volatile region but that is precisely why the Israeli follow-up is so admirable.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Widening Attack on Apartheid

The new restriction on trade with South Africa now making its way through the legislative process represents a growing force in U.S. politics. No longer is opposition to apartheid merely a minority cause or a campus issue or, as Pretoria often claims, a policy whose support is confined pretty much to administration figures who plug it, naively or cynically as the case may be. On the contrary, it is coming to represent a genuine popular movement commanding its own congressional base.

So it is that the House Banking Committee, bardly a collection of bleeding hearts, has just approved what would be the first congressional curb on economic ties with South Africa. Drafted by Rep. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., the amendment would prohibit the Export-Import Bank, a government agency that facilitates U.S. trade, from financing exports to South Africa unless the President determines - and the Congress agrees - that Pretoria is making "significant progress toward the elimination of apartheid."

We are not enamored of the idea of economic sanctions against South Africa. They are a blunt weapon, pressing on both whites responsible for repression and whites seeking reform, on blacks who welcome that pressure as a move against apartheid and on blacks who see it as an invitation to harsher racial confrontation. Thus they lead to hardship for blacks as well as whites.

There is also the question, raised in the Senate Banking Committee, of why South Africa alone should be singled out for its internal defects. The administration, we note, did not support this amendment. It objects even to well-meaning congressional restrictions on executive flexibility, and it does not wish to encourage political ameodments to economic bills.

The political meaning of the Tsongas amendment is nonetheless clear. The U.S. public's consciousness of apartheid is being raised. From the administration, the idea has spread to Congress that U.S. relations with South Africa will inevitably deteriorate further if Pretoria is not seen to be moving with all deliberate speed to alter the nature of a system virtually everyone in the U.S. regards as an abomination and as a temptation to society-wide violence.

Many in South Africa seem to feel their country can tough it out: circumvent or survive the Carter administration and find more "understanding" for apartheid elsewhere in the U.S. body politic. The Tsongas amendment says South Africa is wrong.

Torture in Italy

For newspaper readers and television viewers in Britain, the kidnap of Aldo Moro bas sunk to a background item. Familiar. unresolved, on-going.

For Signor Andreotti, the Prime Minister of Italy, the agony is no less intense than it was at the beginning ... If anything, it is worse. The steady drip, drip, drip of messages supposedly written by the wretched 62year-old president of the Christian Democrats. Aldo Moro, keep up the torture ...

As the clamor for clemency of some kind bow this grisly and marathon trial of strength between terror and democracy will finally end in Italy. What can be said and what needs to be said is that for once there is nothing comic about the huddle of lounge-suited men who preside over this exasperating and lovely country. From somewhere they have dredged up enough low key political heroism to sweat it out. For Italy's sake, they must not surrender

BRUSSELS—"For us Georgians, the sun does not rise m the east, but in the north, in Russia," declared Edward Chevardadze, former chief of the Georgian KGB and oow head of the Communist party and boss of the Cauca-sian republic.

MALTA THE PORTHON DIRECTION OF SHATE PLANTAGE OF THE PARTY OF THE PART

sian republic.

But another Georgian, Vladimir Jvania, did not agree. And to protest the Russification of his nation, he planted three home-made bombs in official buildings in Tbilisi, the capital of the republic. The damage was insignificant and no one was hurt in the explosions, but Jvania was sentenced to death and avacuted as 50 that the sun could executed - so that the sun could continue to rise io the north.

But only until April 16. That day, 5,000 young workers and students marched angrily through the center of Tbilisi and demonstrated for four bours in front of the headquarters of the Communist party Central Committee. The party men were there to discuss the draft of a new constitution. And the demonstrators were there to take part in the discussion, specifically to say "nyet" — in Russian so that these gentlemen could understand it clearly — to a plan to drop the old constitution's Paragraph 137, the one which made the Georgian language the official language of the Georgian republic.

"Children"

The demonstrators did not wait very long. Just as photos of the leading imprisoned Georgian dissidents, and that of the recently executed Jvania, began to appear among the crowd. Chevardadze interrupted the central committee meeting and addressed the demon-strators: "My dear children, what is it that you want?"

"We are not your children," the leaders of the demonstration replied, "and we want to speak our own language."
A few hours later, the pertinent paragraph of the old constitution - and the old laws about the movement of the sun - were reestablished in the Republic of Georgia.

For the Armenians and Azerbaijani, of nearby republics, street demonstrations were not even necessary. Before any mass protest could be organized in Yerevan, capital of Armenia, or Baku, capital of Azerbaijan, the authorities went over the drafts of their constitutions and proclaimed the local national language those of the re-spective republics.

"The Soviet Union was set up on the ruins of the czarist empire, which was dominated by the Russian nation," an observer in Moscow said recently. "It is thus not logical to expect the colonial character of the empire 10 have changed simply because the dominant na-tion has changed its political re-gime and replaced Russian czarism with Russian communism."

And it was a soccer game a few weeks ago that brought the issue of the Baltic states back to the atten-tion of the world. In Vilnyus, the capital of Lithuania, riots erupted last Oct. 10 following a match be-tween a Lithuanian and a Russian team, the latter accused of brutal play. The crowd at the game reproved the Russians' behavior, shouting, "Russians Out," with all its double meaning, and "Katsapy," an injurious invective when applied to the Russians. Suddenly, the televisioo coverage was interrupted for "technical reasons" and about 20,000 persons took to the Naturally, calm was quickly restored. Yet, the day's events were another episode of Baltic resist-ance, after the riots of 1956 in Lithuania following the Hungarian rebellion and after the outburst of anger sparked by the death of Roman Talanta in 1972. Talanta set himself afire on a public square in Vilnyus to protest the Russificanon of Lithuania.

Why in Kiev'

Obviously, the Baltic sun does not rise in Moscow. Nor does that of the Ukrainians, one of whom wrote recently: "We agree with the slogan, 'Russian Workers, Unite' but we do not see why this has to take place in Kiev."

The Soviet Union is the world's last empire still untouched by the process of decolonization. And the longer it takes to get in motion, the more complicated it becomes. Moscow is burdened with the weight of empire on various levels.

Extremists

I would like to express my objection — and my distaste — at the continuous mention of the PLO as "extremist Arabs." This is tentamount to systematically defining Mr. Begin as an "extremist" — which he, like the Palestinian organization, certainly is.

However, Mr. Begin is the elect-ed leader of the state of Israel; likewise, the Palestinians have often. and repeatedly, defined the PLO as their representative, indeed their "sole" one. This has been done by the elected mayors and municipal councillors of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, as well as by whichever Palestinians could vote — in camps, Arab countries, the United States and Europe - for the Palestinian National Council

Let's stop being tendentious, even if we deplore the fact that both the Jewish and the Arab side is led by extremists. It is such "extremists" who will have to make peace with each other. To push as the U.S. government and press do — the idea that the West, or Israel, can replace the chosen and elect ed leadership of the Palestini-ans by somebody else is to indulge in dangerous pipe-dreams, bound to increase suffering on both sides, as futile efforts to exchange political facts for ideas go on.

Cambodia

"Perhaps 500,000 Cambodians died during the Indochina war, many from U.S. bombs and in battles in which the United States played a part," ootes the Washing-ton Post (IHT, April 25). "So Americans cannot be too self-right-eons in respect of reports of 'holo-caust' and 'genocide' coming ont of Cambodia now."

Still, there are those - among them Francois Ponchaud and Jean Lecoutre — who believe the reports but think nevertheless (indeed, all the more) that we are too self-righteous. And there are others who judge that the U.S. government has itself gone too far in the institution-alization of atrocity to be accepted —except possibly by Americans as representing the conscience of mankind. One such is Malcolm Caldwell, of the London School of Oriental and African Studies, who was interviewed recently by a Dan-ish journalist (Peter Wivel, Infor-mation, April 25):

"The present regime in Cambodia stood with the people during the American bombing, worked with them in the fields ... and ... studied ways of feeding Phnom Penh's population Penh's population.

"Concurrently the United States dismissed the idea that it had responsibility for feeding the population - and this at a time when the besieged city was cut off from all normal supplies. Certain inhabitants went through the streets of Phnom Penh every morning and picked up the bodies of those who had died of hunger during the night

But Soviet Foreign Policy Is Gaining 'Momentum'

By Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON-When a football team picks up a couple of first downs, it acquires what announcers call "momentum," and becomes truly danger-ous. So it is with the Soviet Union in foreign policy.

By luck or design, the Russians have recently been scoring some big gains. Stopping them before they acquire momentum has suddenly become a grave problem for the Carter administration.

The big new push forward came in Afghanistan. A military coup last week unseated a nationalist regime. The new government is headed by a Communist, and of the 13 members of the cabinet 11 are said to be Communists. Because Afghanistan is a remote country, bordering on Russia, there is a disposition to write off any changes as largely local. But it is ominous that Washington had no advance knowledge of the change. and that Russia recognized the new regime before its composition was announced. Even more so that the new Prime Minister - Nur Mohammed Taraki - is known for his espousal of Afghan claims on the tribal population of eastern Iran and western Pakistan — what known as Baluchistan. A pro-Communist regime is in a good po-sition to make trouble for both Pakistan and Iran in that area, and the area, as the Shah keeps pointing out, virtually gives access to the Persian Gulf and Saudi Arabia.

Gains in Africa In the Horn of Africa, the Rus-

an the Horn of Africa, the Russiants have recently scored two big gains and set the stage for a third. They and their Cuban allies have helped the military regime to Ethiopia score a smashing triumph over an invasion of the Ogaden province by forces for Servine. province by forces from Somalia.

Apart from being highly regarded in Addis Ababa, they have made the regime in Somalia highly vulnerable. Moreover, the Russians and Cubans can probably iocrease their influence in Ethiopia by helping the regime — either diplomati-cally or militarily — to subdue the secessionist orovement in Eritrea with its ports on the Red Sea. Besides scaring the Saudis even more, a strong Soviet position in Ethiopia provides a wedge for further gains

More tempting still for the Communists is Western Europe. The victory of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and the center in the French legislative elections last month looked like n terrible setback for the Communists throughout that area. But I for one do not see how the chaos in Italy arising from the kidnaping of former pre-mier Aldo Moro can be halted without the Communists creeping

The PLO leadership has made many mistakes, as outsiders see it. This week Arafat praised the Soviet-U.S. declaration on the Middle East as a good basis for settlement — but he had nothing to say in the crucial weeks after it was issued last October.

Moreover, the fatal clashes with the UN forces in southern Lebanon this week threw doubt on Arafat's. ability to control the Palestinians there, as he promised UN Secre-tary-General Waldheim he would. Voice

U.S. policymakers now seem virtually to ignore the PLO, concentrating instead on the effort to rescue President Sadat's fading initiative. But with all its faults, most Palestinians seem to regard the PLO as their collective voice. And it is difficult to see how there can be a real settlement in the Middle East unless account is taken of the Palestinian voice.

U.S., Hungary Ties Seen As Detente Success Story

By Michael Dobbs

pression of the sullen an mosities of pression of the stilled an imposites of the cold war, relations between the United States and Hungary are now being hailed as one of the suc-cesses of detente.

For years, the mutual suspicion was symbolized by the stubborn figure of the late Jozsef Cardinal

Mindszenty, who took refuge in the U.S. Embassy in Budapesi after So-viet troops crushed the 1956 Hun-garian uprising, and remained for 15 years.

Today there is a different symbol of U.S.-Hungarian relations. St. Stephen's crown, regarded by many Hungarians as the embodiment of their country's 1,000-year-old nationhood, is on display in Budapest's National Museum after being locked for more than 20 years in the vaults of Fort Knox.

Favored Status Soon after its return. Washing-ion announced that it was ready to grant most-favored-nation trading status to Hungary. Last Thursday, the House Ways and Means Committee approved the administration proposal. Until now Romania and Poland have been the only Communist nations extended most-favored-nation status by the United

That U.S.-Hungarian relations can get steadily better while U.S.-Soviet relations have been getting steadily worse is partly a tribute to the political skills of the Hungarian leader and Computate active hief leader and Communist party chief. Janos Kadar, ft is also a product of new U.S. policies toward Eastern Europe, aimed at encouraging the more liberal and independent governments within the Soviet bloc.

In Budapest, the opening toward the West is viewed as part of a general attempt to reconcile the Hun-garian people to Communism. Mr. Kadar — who often invokes the slogan, "He who is not against us is for us" — has devoted his career to ohliterating the memory of how be was installed with the backing of Soviet tanks in November, 1956.

Working for Acceptance

"One thing you must realize about Kadar," says a Hungarian journalist who knows him well, "is that be is a very sensitive man who never forgets anything. For the last 20 years, he has been working to be accepted by the people who once condemned him, including Western politicians.

Mr. Kadar's recipe for giving so-cialism a more acceptable face has been based on a gradual easing of eentral controls over intellectual life, travel abroad and the economy. Since the unobtrusive introduction of the so-called New Economic Mechanism in 1968, individual factories have geared their production to the demands of the market rather than to dictates of a central

The new U.S. policy toward Eastern Europe is attributed in Budapest to the influence of the Presiden's national security adviser.
Zbigniew Brzezinski, and his doctrine of "political polycentrism."
The U.S. administration is now believed to be cultivating its relations lieved to be cultivating its relations with individual Warsaw Pact countries, rather than negotiating over their heads with Moscow.

Mr. Brzezinski, who was born in Poland and has a keen interest in Eastern European affairs, evidently believes that countries like Hun-gary and Poland should be treated according to their distinctive national characteristics and not merely as members of a monolithic Soviet-led bloc. Thus it was noticeable that Hungary virtually escaped U.S. criticism at the Belgrade conference reviewing implementation of the 1975 Helsinki declaration, while Czechoslovakia was severely

The negotiations over mostfavored-nation status provided an illustration of Hungary's newfound freedom of action within the bloc. For several years, the Hungarians were obliged to follow Moscow's lead in refusing to give a formal guarantee that they would allow free emigration as required. allow free emigration as required by the Jackson-Vanik amendment to the U.S. Trade Act. It was argued that this amounted to an at-tempt to interfere in internal

Now, however, they have felt confident enough to agree to a va-guely worded compromise, undertaking to deal flexibly with emigra-tion cases in the spirit of Helsinki. Moscow does not appear to have biected.

Hungarian officials believe that the cutting of U.S. import duties by as much as 50 per cent under most-favored-nation status will lead to a big increase in trade. Hungary's prosperity depends on being able to sell abroad.

Amid all the euphoria about the improvement in relations between Washington and Budapest, there are also some ominous signs. The honeymoon has so far managed to survive the deterioration in East-West relations but few Hungarian politicians believe it can do so

They are particularly uneasy about SALT. It is believed here that if the Soviet Union were to feel its security in any way challenged, it would immediately seek to reimpose a monolithic orthodoxy on Eastern Europe.

One influential Hungarian commentator said. The Soviets would restore all the old ideological controls, preventing us from pursuing many of our liberal policies. The hard-line faction in our leadership would be strengthened — and the first casualty would be good relations with the United States."

The only official information was provided by the President, who, in an interview last month with Azap, the national news agency, confirmed that the army had intervened. He said the problem began with pockets of rebels who were left from the war in Shaba province last year and who infiltrated hundreds of miles to the north in December and early January north in December and early January and presented themselves as Kimbanguists, a Christian cult that is one of three officially sanctioned

The rebels killed those who would not follow them, according to Mr. Mobutu, and captured sevon the government to restore order. The army "decimated" the rebels. Azap said, and after a trial 14 rin-

Those involved in the revolt, the sources maintained were not affili-ated with the Katangese insurgents in Shaba but were indigenous villagers sympathetic to the teachings of Pierre Mulele, a populist leader who led a revolt in the former Belgian Congo in 1964 and 1965 and has remained a powerful cult figure since his death.

The sources said a Zairian from the Tetela tribe in Eastern Kasai who used the name Kasango - he ple the central government.

With the activity concentrated on the village of Mulembe, Mr. Mulele's birthplace, bands of rebels soon roamed the area, gathering supporters in surrounding villages, looting and burning municipal offices and carrying off records. An official accountant who refused to turn over a cashbox was killed. A Belgian priest, the Rev. Close Julien, who runs an industrial-arts program near Mulembe, was briefly held, then released with apologies.

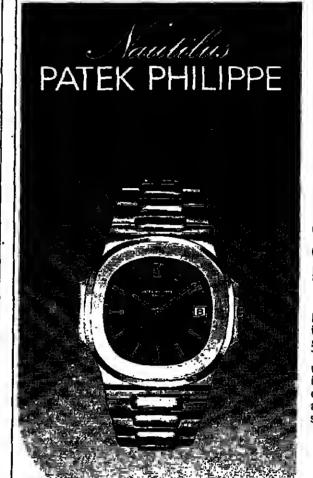

The troops that attacked Mulembe were met by a rain of arrows
— the movement eschews non-African weapons - ravaged the village, killing perhaps 50 persons, accord-ing to someone who visited shortly afterward. The troops were followed by the paratroopers, who went from village to village rounding up and executing suspects, sources said.

Sharing of Wealth Splits Indonesia

By Henry Kamm

JAKARTA, (NYT)-Concrete office towers and imposing govern-ment buildings have sprung up in this boom-town capital and in other cities of Indonesia. Mercedes-Benz automobiles are common-place, and the initials of Pierre Cardin are worn like a badge of new ricbes by sleck men and women in public places.

But Indonesia is again expected to fall short, this year by 2.7 million tons, in production of rice, the country's staff of life. This means that it will have to spend about a quarter of its foreign earnings from petroleum, the principal export, to buy n'ee abroad. Indonesia is the world's leading rice importer.

A recent study by a group of health and population experts, an Indonesian and two Americans, estimated that infant mortality on the island of Java, where more than 80 million of Indonesia's 135 million inhabitants live, was between 130 and 144 per 1,000, which is 30 to 40 times higher than in the West. The scientists estimated that one-fifth of the children born in Java do not reach 5 years of age.

60% Malnourished

Dr. Sjachroel Malasan, nutrition director at the Health Ministry, has estimated that 60 per cent of Indonesia's population is malnour-ished. The daily per-capita protein intake is estimated at less than the minimum 40 grams set by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization. Average daily protein consumption in the United States is about 100 grams.

The average yearly meat con-sumption is 8.4 pounds, compared with 176 in the United States. An Indonesia's natural resources average Indonesian drinks about a minerals, timber, rubber and cofpint of milk a year, roughly what an American drinks in a day, and

These statistics are known to few Indonesians. But in a nation where most people live at or below the most people live at or below the poverty line, the gap between rich and poor is leading to increased questioning among intellectuals about the course of development. And it has spread to include the great number of foreigners connected with this development - private businessmen, officials of international organizations and other expens and government aid representatives. The critical attitude comes across particularly strongly among the students, who began late last year to defy political repression and stage public protests against the re-election of President Suharto. But it appears to be the above the stage of t it appears to be shared by many intellectuals, including those in public service. The students have subsided since a government crack-down preceding the elections last month, but still express skepticism in conversations.

The disenchantment also extends

Their immediate targets are the most visible ones: The authoritarian government, corruption and the inequality of distribution of wealth. They say that since the regime bas been installed for another five velopment reach the majority.

The students' ideas tend to be idealistic in a conservative nation that remains traumatized from the vast bloodletting that followed the 1965 Communist coup attempt. Many students interviewed in the course of a 19-day visit advocated a Gandhian village-based develop-ment approach, with small-scale or cottage industries to create jobs. About a million young Indones come into the labor market each

The government's emphasis, however, is on development, based on the extraction of Indonesia's vast resources, in the expectation that each extraction operation will serve as a center of local development as well as of foreign exchange. The critics do not con-sider this program socially oriented enough. They regard it as more conducive to proliteering than to increasing the well-being of the people in the area.

In brief, a hthearted paraphrase of "The rvant in the House" and "The issing of the Third Floor Back."

Parlor Types

The assembled are a familiar asrtment of bourgeois parior types. here is a grumpy father, an exfarine who is now a prison guard a nearby penitentiary, his wistful ife, who finds solace in the gin ottle; his high-school son, arroant over his scholastic superiority; is young daughter, in search of a b and a man; and a nuisance of n aunt, a religious fanatic, paying n unsolicited visit

RIS May 4 (IHT)-Jack vice when questioned; and it honks Fitzgerald is a unique figure rudely in reprimand when its listenbe Parisian theatrical scene an structure is plain and simple, inspired by the truth-game formula of countless plays, but it is sturdy enough to support the author in his purpose of character investigation.

Somerset Maugham, in a late interview, explained that he had abandoned playwriting because. having reached an advanced age, he no longer got about much and had no idea of how people, especially young people, talked. Fitzgerald, who people the greater part of the who spends the greater part of the year in his bomeland, does get about and has a keen ear for the American lingo of the moment. One may not be au courant of every vulgarism in circulation and doubtless Fitzgerald improvises for comic ends, but the dialogue has an authenue ring. Fitzgerald's manipulation of quick caricature is akin to the scheme that Ring Lardner em-ployed to depict baseball riffraff, goofy pugilists and Tin Pan Alley trash. It is a humor achieved not by physical identification but by ver-bal. The members of the family are visually indistinguishable from stock stencils, but let one of them open his-or her-mouth and personality is stamped with jocose exactitude. The performance under the author's direction has community theater edge, but it is amusing played, with Patty Pyott as the yearning bousewife, Billy Margolis as ber fat-headed busband, Elizabeth Raack and Ken Wishnia as their children, Mary Ryan as the domineering aunt and with Charles Den Tex as the amiable salesman.

At Le Petit Odeon, a stimulating course in 18th-century literature continues. Rousseau (at 9:30 p.m.) and the younger Crebillon (at 6:30 p.m.) follow last month's recital in costume of Diderot's "Paradoxe sur le Comedien."

Crebillon's "La Nuit et le Moment" is a minor masterpiece of aristocratic elegance, full flavor and rakish conceits, Its production provides the season with its most entertaining and sophisticated sex comedy. It shimmers with turns of phrase and thought in reflecting the rococo age's notion that love is only a charming pastime and that renders its victims ridiculous.

ONE BIG UNHAPPY FAMILY—Billy Margolis and Patty Pyott (bottom), and Ken Wishnia and Elizabeth Raack battle through Jack Fitzgerald's "The Fabulous FP 140 Machine."

Jean-Louis Thamin, responsible for the scenic version and the direction, has lent it a somber note by dressing it in mourning, explaining in the program that this signifies the close relation of eroticism and death. Dominique Borg's handsome, macabre decor of regal black and silver is suggestive of a Louis XV funeral chamber. No doubt this is a daring pictorial experiment, but the airy, witty Crebillon text would seem more suited to the delicate tints and shadings of Watteau's fetes galantes.

At the Theatre de l'Atelier, Romain Bouteille tries to make an evening of the duologue form in a full-length play that he has confected and directed: "La Plus Gentille." Bouteille, who might be termed a French Woody Allen, is a droll grotesque of the cabarets and his comic presence has enlivened many a brief sketch.

The scheme, in a sense, is Crebillon in modern dress, with a fumwoman's apartment and falling into long discourse with her. They exchange opinions on a variety of matters and, again like Allen, there is no subject too lofty to be included in their conversation. The opening 20 minutes are fairly diverting. but thereafter the project sags.
It may be argued that a playing several hours, but the fact remains that no playwright has ever done so. There have been some ad-mirable plays with only two charac-ters, but they have been one-act plays of a half-hour's duration.

Japanese Model Refused to Become Europeanized

Sayoko Now a Hit in Paris

By Jane M. Friedman

DARIS May 4 (IHT) - Five years I ago, when a Japanese model named Sayoko first tiptoed down the fashion runways of Paris, with her timid kimona look and very Oriental features, fashion reporters and buyers thought designers had temporarily gone mad. But today, Sayoko—who at 5 feet 6 inches is shorter than most models, skinnier and looks like she stepped out of "Sayonara"—has taken Paris by storm. While Japanese and black American models have become a la mode in Paris, replacing the Nordic and French types, Sayoko has become the star of the lot.

"She is unique in her genre," said an aide to Kenzo Takada, France's ready-to-wear designer, after the recent fall showing in which Sayoko participated. "Her way of moving is very special...perfection."

"Despite her size," said Jaqueline Jacobson of Dorothee Bis. "she is exceptional. She understands the garment Oddly enough, Sayoko Yamagu-chi eonquered the Paris fashion world more easily than her native Japan. "American features are fa-vored in Japan," she said in an interview, her hair pulled back behind her oversized ears and black eye liner accentuating her Oriental eyes. "I was told if I made up as a foreigner I would be hired. Even Kenzo, Dorothee Bis, Yves Saint Laurent, Issey Miyake and Claude Montana, making about 1,500 francs per show. She turned down several additional offers.

Discovered in 1972

In Japan, she is the house model for Kansai Yamamoto, the Japanese ready-to-wear designer who discovered her in 1972. When she isn't working she lives with her parents in Yokohama, an hour by train from Tokyo.

Sayoko, who looks frail as a bird and talks in soft tones, was born in Yokohama, daughter of a Japanese tax inspector. After high school, she attended fashion school in Tokyo, and after that, set out to model. None of the designers would have her, she says. If felt that if they wanted me to look European, I wasn't interested. I'd go back to making clothes."

The breakthrough occurred when a model fell ill on the night of a Yamamoto show. Yamamoto called on Sayoko and the two have been working together since. "After Kansai hired me," she says, "many other Japanese designers, who had rejected me before, changed their minds." Paris followed shortly

Today, the 28-year-old model is doing Paris twice a year. This season she modeled in 12 ready-to-Savoko has e fixed routine in Paris. She does no shows before wear shows here, including those of Kansai's but will do any others aft-crward. She especially enjoys working for Claude Montana because she finds his line "very strong," She admires Kenzo's "dreamy world," The bmid-looking Sayoko says she is not upset by the meatmarkel aspeet of modeling but concerned about how best "to express the dress" and herself. She says Japa-nese models have "feelings and an aura not found among European

"In the past" she said through an interpreter, "I was fascinated by France. I would go to French films and read French literature. I don't know why." Today, she prefers to read about Japanese history and culture. "Many Japanese matory and culture. "Many Japanese women still admire foreigners." she says, "they have complexes. But the Jap-anese people who know themselves well are proud to be Japanese."

Sayoko feels close to the black American models she works with and says the two groups must band together to defend themselves.

But if being totally Japanese has been difficult for the model in Japan. French designers bave flipped for Sayoko. And yet she is unimpressed with her own personal achievements, says Paris feels like any other city and hopes 10 go on to fashion-related professions—perhaps designing-when she tires of

The stars of French gastronomy were honored with 97 different Oriental delicacies. Among the items they had never experienced were braised sea cucumber, apricots baked in salt, cod's maw stuffed with shrimp and mashed lotus-seed dumplings.
The hosts paid homage to their distinguished guests by sandwiching into the three overstuffed days an eight-course French dinner complete with nine wines and alcohols. Even the European menu was researched with Far East finesse. The opening gulantine was com-posed of nine ingredients, named for the traditional nine dragons of Kowloon, For the Occidentals, the Orientals chose an essence of pheasant soup made with "the bird of Phasis, the river which joined Europe with Asia." As a main course, scholarly Annie Wu, who runs the eating club at the World Trade Center here, unearthed a recipe for stuffed quails, a dish originally prepared for the Diamond Ju-hilee of Queen Victoria in 1897.

On the third day, the French party was still able to rouse enthusiries. Pigeon is a Cantonese specialty and symbolizes a puzzle of paradoxes...long life, filial piety, lasciviousness, stupidity. Business Groups Hit UN Code

NEW YORK, May 4 (AP-DJ)— Extensive new disclosure rules for international corporations, pro-posed last year by a committee of the United Nations and enthusias-tically backed by Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, are beginning to arouse some opposition.

The International Chamber of Commerce and the International Organization of Employers, both business groups, said adoption of the proposed rules would be "premature." In a joint statement, they called for "a great deal more careful consideration by competent national and intergovernmental bodies as well as professional

The proposed rules are scheduled for consideration by the UN's Commission on Transnational Corporations at the meeting beginning May 16 in Vienna. The commission is debating a possible code of conduct for companies with operations in more than a single country. While the UN has no direct authority over corporations, some an-alysts worry that its endorsement the proposal would encourage individual countries to use it as a model for their own disclsoure rules. Also, the UN's Secretary General already bas called for an intergovernmental agreement on standards of accounting and disclo-

U.S. representatives will oppose adoption of the new rules, according to a spokesman for the U.S. mission to the UN. Detailed position papers on the proposal still are being written, she said, but "we don't like it."

The recommendations deal with both financial reporting and disclosure in such areas as labor practices, environmental policies, organizational structure and investment programs. U.S. accountants say the proposed financial reporting is patterned after present U.S. disclosure requirements, but is more comprehensive than the accounting rules of other countries. The nonfinancial information called for is much more extensive than currently is required to be made public in any

The purpose of the proposal is to will bold the first of at least six mimprove the availability and commonthly auctions of 300,000 parability of information presented in the general purpose reports of transnational corporations," said Mr. Waldheim in endorsing the committee report. Auto Imports to U.S. Fall 9.4% percent in April from record year-earlier levels, the first such drop since August 1976 and the apparent

Sales of auto imports in the United States fell 9.4

179,500 units. Toyota, the top-selling import, showed a sales decline in the first four months of 12.3 percent, Datsun's sales were off 13.2 percent,

Honda's were down 3.9 percent and Volkswagen's were off 25.6 percent. British Leyland showed a 27-percent decline and Renault 38.5 percent.

British-Leyland's shutdown of an auto body and components plant at Castle Bromwich because of three unofficial disputes could be a major blow to hopes of re-stocking dealers' inventories, depleted by record sales two months ago. The disputes, which caused the furloughing of 4,000 workers Wednesday for lack of materials, could halt production of the nationalized company's leading car models in the Birmingham and Coventry area and idle many more workers. Two of the disputes involve 56 tool fitters and 18 building maintenance workers who have ob-

The chamber also said it was "deeply concerned" at the possibilithat multinational companiesmight have to meet reporting requirements that were more extensive than the rules applied to strictly national companies. This would put the multinationals at a competitive disadvantage, the chamber said. Moreover, it added, the cost

Gold Prices Up $2.50 an Ounce

LONDON, May 4 (Reuters)-The price of gold shot up $2.50 an ounce today in the wake of yesterday's auction by the International Monetary Fund where bids were received for six times the amount of gold on sale.

The price here closed at $173.60-$174 an ounce.

The strong performance was considered particularly important in view of the releases from official gold holdings now coming outd the market. The Reserve Bank of India is shortly expected to announce the results of the first of seven auctions from its gold stocks. Some 2.4 mil-lion ounces are expected to be sold. mmet reported today. Following last year's equally disappointing results—when world group aet fell 48 percent to 304 million DM—Mr. Sammet said he saw "no indication that 1978 would be any better." Overcapacity in certain sectors, such as libers and bulk plastics, as well as the impact of the steep climb in the value of the mark on Hoechst's market share at bome and in foreign markets continue to pose severe problems, he said.

For the domestic chemical industry as a whole, Mr. Sammet predicted no growth in turnover at all in 1978. However, be forecast a pickup in the second half, which should allow Hoechst to "avoid a further deterioration in 1978

World group sales rose 0.7 percent in the first quarter to 5.88 bil-lion DM compared with the yearago period. Domestic sales dropped 2 percent to 1.97 billion DM, while foreign sales were up 2.1 percent to 3.92 billion DM.

Parent company turnover dropped 6.2 percent in the first quarter to 2.27 billion DM, with exports falling nearly 8 percent. Mr. Sammet attributed the drop primarily to currency developments.

"The Market Tells You"

Analysts Assume Curtiss Lost Kennecott Battle

By Robert J. Cole

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT)—Shares of Curtiss-Wright started to decline yesterday as speculation spread through Wall Street that the New Jersey conglomerate had failed in its proxy fight for control of Kennecott Copper. "It's our guess that Kennecott won," said E. F. Hutton & Co. in an advisory report telephoned to its institutional sales force across the country.

"If Curtiss-Wright had won," a leading broker remarked, "Kennecoll shares would be up two or three points." Another said: "The market tells you that people think Curtiss-Wright lost."

The theory among Wall Street professionals is that Curtiss-Wright had failed to attract enough proxies to take control of Kennecott at the big copper company's tumultuous annual meeting

Tuesday when the votes were cast. The official tally for the biggest, most expensive proxy war in many years is not expected to be known for several weeks. Independent inspectors are already busy separating the votes cast for each side before searching for duplicate votes with the latest dates to determine which will be accepted. Kennecott has some 33 million shares, with each one valid for one vote, but in most proxy fights at least 15 percent of the shares are never voted. Wall Street professionals said that in this instance at least 20 percent of the shares were not voted-thus eliminating an estimated 6.6 million sbares from the contest. The unusually high percentage of the shares that apparently were not voted this time were believed to be in the hands of foreign investors who were reluctant to vote for either side, possibly because of confusion over the repeated charges and countercharges by both sides in the struggle for control. Based on this estimate. Kennecott would need a simple majority of the remaining 26.4 million shares. There was some speculation that Kennecott directors-widely regarded as the cream of American business—spoke with a number of big Kennecott sharebolders to solicit proxies with hints that they might be amenable to a takeover at some future point by a more acceptable company, Frank Milliken, chairman, said at the annual meeting that the company was willing to "examine" merger proposals and investments from outside sources.

market Roger Tamraz, chairman of First Arabian Corp., a Luxembourg-chartered halding company con-trolled by Mideast investors, con-firmed in an interview that he had discussed the possibility of buying into Commonwealth Oil, which has refining operations and petrochemical plants in Puerto Rico and which has filed for court protection under the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Last month, First Arabian made an offer to purchase Come-by-Chance, a 100,000 barrel-a-day re finery in Newfoundland owned by Shaheen Natural Resources. The refinery was declared bankrupt two years ago, and debts were recently estimated at $600 million. The offer, the details of which are secret, is still being considered by Canadian officials, who rejected an earlier offer by a U.K. concern.

Mr. Tamraz confirmed he had discussed the Commonwealth refinery in Puerto Rico with executives of Tesoro Percelant Tesoro Petroleum, which is Commonwealth's largest single shareholder with 36.7 percent. Commonwealth spokesmen would not comment and efforts to obtain comment from Tesoro representatives were unsuccessful.

Courtenay Slater, chief economist at the Commerce Department, said the food-price increase "is not a trend, it's a fluctuation. It will eventually correct itself." President Carter, however, said in a speech in Los Angeles that the increase "has caused me great concern." The index was up 7 percent from a year earlier.

Food prices rose 1.9 percent last month. With the exception of a 2.9-percent gain in February, the increase was the biggest since the 2.5-percent advance in February 1977.

The nonfood category, which had been advancing at a moderate elip of 0.5 percent or less since last autumn, rose a sharp I percent last month for the the largest gain since a 1.7-percent advance in October 1974.

The overall finished goods index stood at 191.4 percent of its 1967 base, meaning that goods that cost $191.40 last month were priced at $100 in 1967, Besides food, the department said consumer durables, such as automobiles, appliances and furniture, rose rapidly. In an unusual note, the depart-

The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is our policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and bank notes, money market transactions and precious metals.

Geographically, too, we work mainly in areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A. (our U.S. affiliate, Republic National Bank of New York, is now one of America's 60 largest banks). It also includes a number of countries which, frankly, many other banks lack the first-hand knowledge to tackle properly.

What's more, we keep our backoffice systems running abreast of our business. You don't notice this directly. but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors.

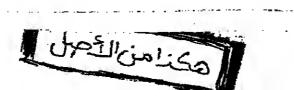

Serving our clients well has belped us grow uncommonly fast.
Today, we're big enough to provide

ON PRESS By Tom Wicker, Viking, 271 pp. 810.95. Reviewed by Harry McPherson until he became Washington bureau chief of The Times, he saw that it "almost always favors Establishment positions, and that is exists not least to avoid offense to them." Dunked in the swirling waters of the last two decades—the Bay of Pigs. Vietnam, Watergate, the Imperial Presidency, CIA, FBI, and corporate wrongdoing—he has emerged with a shoul for an engaged, activist journalism, one which "takes an adversary position toward the most powerful institu-tions of American life."

"Adversary," in Wicker's pre-scription, does not necessarily mean hostile, but challenging, testing, cross-examining. Objective journalists-timid souls-merely report the challenges of others; ad versary journalists mount their own. Their role is to purge, to excoriate, "to find out before the fact what a [polluting] corporation is planning, to defeat with publicity what may be the despoiling of a river or the ruination of a community by some building project _"Al-though corruption is afoot, self-seeking everywhere, the weapon of exposure, like Obi Wan Kenobi's sword in "Star Wars," is there to project the onwary and defenseless public—even as that public grum-bles about tendentious reporting in the press.

Heady stuff, particularly for young reporters with an urge to discomfit the rich, the powerful, or the merely complacent. To satisfy that urge, to he an actor in the po-litical process—not merely to re-port it—to compel reform, and at he same time to acknowledge no other responsibility but to the truth (as, of course, one sees it) is an op-portunity few persons are afforded. It is also one way to catch a severe case of hubris.

Wicker acknowledges this, sparingly. "By the mid-seventies, many charged the press with opposition for opposition's sake, and too many reporters, I fear, were providing reason for the charge," He provides few examples, Indeed, in responding to familiar charges against the "new journalism—that it is often biased, underinformed, whimsical when it is not fatuously proseculo-rial—his book "On Press" is in the nature of an old legal plea called "confession and avoidance"; one admits certain facts but offers others that render what is admitted essentially irrelevant.

The principal other fact is that in contending with the establishment, the advantage always lies against the press. There is the screen of the press. There is the screen of "national security"; "the myth persists that the government's secrets are vital." There are the president's "never-ending effort to get the news reported as favorably as possible," and his use of timing and circumstance to achieve that end. circumstance to achieve that end. There is the press's own fear of seeming unpatriotic of losing friendships or status, by printing embarrassing stories. The press may seem to have power, but in fact it is overmatched by other institutions and its own timidity. (One day I should like to learn who really has power in America: not the press, says Wicker; not the president, but the Congress, says the White House; not Congress, but the Executive, says Capitol Hill; the courts, as they say, only interpret the laws; and lobbies for economie interests seem to lose more often than win. Is it the voters? According to the polls, they don't think so. I am inclined to believe it is inertia).

Faced with these imponderable difficulties in revealing the truth, the press is justified. Wicker writes, in printing whatever it knows.
"Nothing is ever finally off the record if it's said within the hearing

TOM WICKER. The New York

I Times columnist was born again in the 1960s. A practitioner of "objective journalism" from his days on the Sandhill, N.C., Citizen wading presidential privacy but as vading presidential privacy, but as wrestlers on television do: After a few groans, but no serious injuries, the reporter's duty to publish, and the public's right to know, win our If it were otherwise, the voters might not know what sort of fellow they had installed in the White House. Besides, some less scrupu-lous reporter would ultimately hear the story and—calamity!—score a Asking the press to be "adver-sary" toward the Washington polit-ical establishment, in the wake of an unpopular war, scandals of all kinds, abuses of power, etc., is like begging dogs to fight cats. And it is this natural inclination, spirred on by the pressures of competition, that produces in some journalists what reads like a sense of moral infallibility. No one can gainsay the vital and often seminal role that the press has played in the last decade in alerting the public to the threats it faced from its own government. But I would have been happier with "On Press" if I thought Tom Wicker included the press itself in the establishment toward which he pro-poses an adversary relationship; if the skepticism of reporters was an consistently directed toward themselves, as toward the persons they cover; if along with "challenging,"

"cross-examining," and "robust"— all good adjectives for a good press—he had included "fair." Public enlightenment, as well as the press's own credibility, depends at east as much on the fair presentation of opposing views, as on being reminded that kings on the throne sit upon their own bottoms.

Harry McPherson, the author of "A Polincul Education," was special counsel to President Johnson,

BRIDGE

North and South are the foremost exponents of a complex relay style of bidding that may be the way of the future for experts willing to devote hours to practice. On the diagramed deal they climbed to six diamonds by a route that needs some explanation.

The one club bid was strong and forcing, and the response of two diamonds conventionally showed cer-tain specific bonor combinations and a balanced hand. North's next three bids were relay inquiries asking for further information, and the answers revealed that South had a 3-2-3-5 distribution and two aces.

North now placed the contract in six diamonds, hoping that West, with little to guide him in the bidding about the North band, would not hit on a spade lead. West obliged by leading a hears, and the ten won in the dummy.

South had to choose between developing clubs and playing the heart ruffs. The latter seemed better, so he led to the beart ace, returned to the club king and ruffed a 30 heart. He then led a trump to the dummy, and ruffed the last heart with his last trump. As West held

Franchise Owner Owes Public Truth

Jekyll and Hyde Root for the Home Teams

By Dave Anderson

NEW YORK, May 4 (NYT)-It's as if Roy Boe were twins — one the friendly, peanut-munching rooter for the New York Islanders and the New Jersey Nets, the other a wheeler-dealer who projects more suspicion than credibility. The wheeler-dealer is being sued for $10 million for allegedly divert-ing $3.5 million "surreputiously" from the relatively prosperous Islanders to the virtually insolvent Nets or himself. In litigation brought by Thomas Thornton, one of the Islanders many limited particles. ners. Boe also was accused of having concealed financial data from his Islander partners and of having called on them for additional finuncing to cover his cash drain.

Boe denied the charges yester-day. But now the whispers that have circulated around Boe for several years are in the public domain where the owner of a sports franchise belongs. It is one thing for a wheeler-dealer to mismanage a private firm; it is quite another for a wheeler-dealer to mismanage sports franchises that are really u public trust for the people who spend their money and their emo-tions to support those franchises.

Juggling Ends

"What some people don't alize," an Islander spokesman acknowledged, "is that there has heen no diversion of funds for the last year or so. The banks wouldn't let us. That's why the Nets have had so much trouble lately. Some people also don't realize that the Nets earried the Islanders the first two years.

Boe's financial woes are common knowledge. When the Nets were absorbed by the National Basketball Association two years ago. their territorial indemnity fee to the Knicks was $4 million, of which they have paid $800,000 with the remaining $3.2 million to be paid over 20 years, iocluding the 74 per-cent interest. When the Nets moved from the Nassau Coliseum to New Jersey last year, they agreed to pay the Knicks another $4 million over 20 years, beginning in 1980. Back when the Islanders joined the National Hockey League as an expansion team in 1972, their fee was $10 million — $4 million to the Rangers for territorial indemnity, $6 million to the other NHL clubs. Their payments to the Rangers have been on schedule.

"Aod we're trying," the Islander spokesman said, "to buy up our obligations to the other NHL clubs at 50 ceots on the dollar. Other oew teams were absolved of their fees but ours wereo't because we're considered a successful team."

Public Trust

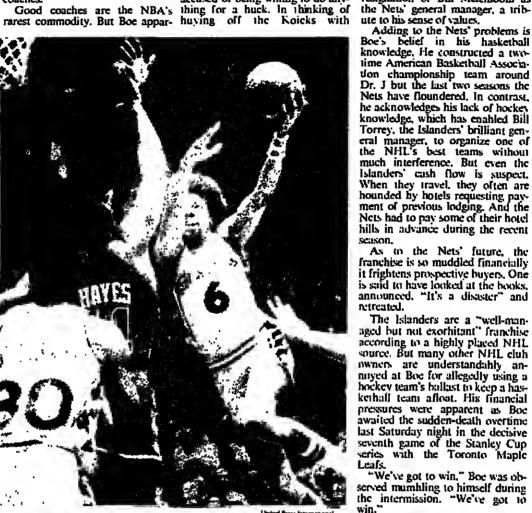

So much for the cold, hard dollar signs that accountants look at. But beyond those dollar signs is the es-sence of the situation. Who is Boe, what is he doing and is he worthy of the public trust of operating two major league franchises? Perhaps the answers will emerge from the

All the big names - the Earl Campbells, Art Stills, Wes Chandlers, Chris Wards and the rest of the noureau riche - were grabbed early Tuesday, when the balcony surrounding the Grand Concourse of the Recognition of the Recog sevelt Hotel was packed with vociferous onlookers, the hard-core fan-who chart a team's development — or disintegration.

Through much of Tuesday and yesterday, the reading of a player's name usually brought a response like, "Who?" or "How do you spell it." or just silence from the emptying balcony.

The only "name" player mentioned yesterday was Ernie Holmes, the Pintsburgh Steelers' six-year defensive tackle. The 6-foot-3, 300-pound one-time mainstay of the Steel Curtain defense that won two Super Bowls was dealt to the Tampa Bay Buccancers for a pair of draft choices, one in the 10th round and one in the 11th. With them, the Steelers picked North-ern Arizona's place-kicker, Tom Jurich, and Florida State defensive tackle

In another swap, San Diego sent third-year wide receiver Larry Dorsey to Kansas City in exchange for defensive end Wilbur Young, a 6-6, 290pounder entering his eighth season.

By the end of the 12th round, after 17 hours and 16 minutes, 333 players had been divided up among the NFL's 28 teams. It started with Campbell, the Heisman Trophy-winning running back from the University of Texas and signed by the Houston Oilers to a six-year, $1.4-ntillion contract, and ended with Lee Washhurn, a guard from Montana State picked by the Cowboys.

The players most in demand were defensive backs. Fifty of them were selected, followed by 47 line backers, 44 running backs and 41 wide receivers. Florida was the most popular school with the pros. losing 10 players, followed by Notre Dame, Pittsburgh, Nebraska, Southern California and Washington State with eight each. And the Southeast Conference had 36 players selected to win those bragging rights, followed by the Pacific-8 with 34 taken.

Why

Another fierce struggle devel-oped in the House Firmament the dry land. Everybody was dissairisfied with the bill's meager provisions for stocking the dry land after its creation. This passage said, "Let the earth hring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, mon the earth."

would also have to be perfect and eternal. A Creation peopled exclusively by perfect and eternal persons, they said, would be unbearably dull. They demanded that the bill be modified to have man created imperfect and temporary.

Consumer groups argued that Committee about the creation of ed is in itself, upon the earth." While grass, berbs and fruit were all very nice. House members noted, the bill was suspiciously si-lent on such matters as oil. It was quickly amended to read. "Let there also be oil." The issue of where the oil was to be placed, however, was not so readily settled. This impasse might have lasted for years except for the interven-tion of Sen. William Proximire, chairman of the powerful Public Virtue Committee, who opposed creating the oil anywhere near New York on the ground that New York would waste it in sinful pursuits purpose of getting idle consins on the city payroll.

Under the Proxmire compromise, Texas and Louisiana got the utanium. oil and New England got the great whales, which were to be created under the original provisions of the tion with the funeral and fund-raisbill. the only conceivable purpose for putting ia an appendix and gall bladder was to make work for surgeons. When the feminist lobby agreed to support the appendix-and-gall-bladder amendment in return for the AMA's agreement to support renaming the committee, however, the fight was settled.

There were many more. One of the bitterest was over the language in the nriginal hill proposing that man be created "in the image of God." This was intensely contested by a coalition of foundations and fund-raising groups. Since God was perfect and eternal, they pointed ou., a man designed in his image would also have to be perfect and

La Musicienne Ends Her Long Silence

By Calla Corner

NEUCHATEL, Switzerland (IHT)—The diminutive blonde that is now playing at the Salle Jaquet-Droz in Le Musee des Beaux Arts ia Neuchatel has been called the other Joconde. Better known as La Musici-enne, she is the 200-year-old creation of Pi-erre Jaquet-Droz, the 18th-century Swiss clockmaker from La Chaud-de-Fonds who made many outstanding clocks and a series of automatons and three androids (antima-tons in human form). L'Ecrivain, Le Dessi-nateur and La Musicienne, that were the talk of European salons of that period.

La Musicienne is the masterpiece of this man, considered the linest Swiss elockmaker nf his time hur who was also a musician. scientist and could have qualified as a professor of anatomy. Jaquet-Droz's elients in-lessor of anatomy. Jaquet-Droz's elients included most of the royal heads of Europe.

Henri Narquis, a horological historian who bas researched the story of the android for a book, "La Musicienne," to be published later this year by Scriptar, believes that she resembles Jaquet-Droz's wife, who died in ber late twenties. La Musicienne and the electrolyte to use to build and took the clockmaker to years to huild and was probably more of a private project than a commercial venture although during the years that she performed, before being lost, she reaped substantial sums of money for her various owners and is now valued at a half-million Swiss francs.

La Musicienne is 1.5 meters tall and has the makeup, bairdo and dress of an elegant 18th-century lady. She plays five melodies 18th-century lady. She plays five melodies composed by Jaquet-Droz on a miniature elavicord of beautiful marquetry. Each melody lasts 45 seconds, the rotating time of the mecbanism's principal cam. While she plays her chest beaves gently up and down and her eyes lonk at the audience, the keys and then close for a moment as if she were trying to remember the aext note. At the end of each piece she hows politely.

Fingers Hit Keys

What makes la Musicienne remarkable is that ber fingers actually hit the keys; her little elavicord will not play by itself. Also, she plays in the style of clavicord players of the 18th century, her hands cupped so that the last articulations of ber fingers are not needed. She has been the object of study by several musicologists who have been able to approximate from her playing how clavicor-dists played 200 years ago.

To accomplish the feat of constructing a doll almost human in appearance and in her ability to manipulate a keyboard. Pierre Jaquet-Droz joined his knowledge of clockmaking and music with the medical knowhow of his good friend and Neuchatel sur-geon. Abraham Gagnebin. The result is a series of cams, highly complex in their interchange of movements, and a pair of hands that contain mechanical tendons, muscles and joints.

The aim of 18th-century makers of androids was not only to create innovative meebanical instruments of high quality but to present a mysterious artificial being that would stupify audiences and elicit admira-tion for its maker. For this reason La Musicienne was exhibited only before distinguished audiences. Servants in the grand homes and palaces where she performed were never allowed to attend her concerts. as they were sure to consider ber a creation

Her Debut

La Musicienne made her debut as part of a one-man show of Jaquet-Droz's works in 1774 at La Chaud-de-Fonds. Shortly thereafter, she appeared at the court of Louis XVI. She then traveled to London, Brussels, Prague and Madrid, While she was in Madrid, war erupted and her owner sold her hastily to provide for his escape from Spain. Napoleon's soldiers brought her back to Paris and she was sold to a private collector.

During the 19th century she became an object of curiosity at local fairs throughout Europe. Her delicate, fair complexion was darkened by haphazard layers of paint, her makeup and hairdo were touched up at ran-dom and her playing degenerated into caco-phony, giving her the air of a woman who had lived, which indeed she had, rather than the precious, aristocratic lady of talent that Jaquet-Droz had created.

Then, in 1907, the Societe d'Histoire et d'Archeologie of Neuchatel located La Musicienne in a private collection in Berlin and bought her for 75,000 Swiss francs.

Since then, she has been on display off and on at the Musee des Beaux Arts in Neuchatel, but silent because her mechanism had been badly damaged.

When, due to lack of funds and local politics, the Musee des Beaux Arts was having difficulty keeping its doors open, it was sug-gested that if La Musicienne were restored and made the center of attraction in a wing dedicated to the works of Jaquet-Droz, the museum as well as part of the city's heritage would be preserved.

Six months ago a young French expert in restoration was hired by the museum to bring sleeping beauty back to life. Twenty-seven years old and admitting that a job of this stature usually comes at the end instead of the beginning of a career. Dominique Loiseaux has spent 700 bours since the beginning of March removing and disassem-bling the hundreds of parts, eleaning and fiddling with the mechanism so that La Musicienne can play her five brief but charming melodies once again,

Lunt died last August, but Miss Fontanne opened in their last Broadway show, "The Visit." tanne observed the anniversary of the couple's last opening by attend-ing a performance of "Hello Dolly!" at the theater named for them, as the guest of Carol Chann-

President Carter's 79-year-old mother has arrived in Copenhagen with 379 other Americans for a 10-day "Friendship Force" visit. "Hello everybody, I'm Jimmy's mother" she said, adding that the flight from New York was pleasant. Miss Lillian, as the is called, and the other Americans will be guests of Danish Americans will be guests of Danish families under the auspices of the "Friendship Force" program that was initiated by her son in 1973 when he was governor of Georgia. The same aumber of Danes left for New York, where they will be be guests of Americans in Westchester County, N.Y. Mrs. Carter will be the guest of Erik Svitter Lyngbye, 48, and his wife, Birgit, 45, who live in an apartment in the Frederiksberg district of the city. He is director of a printing firm. Mrs. Carter's security guard also will be guests of the Lyngblye family.
